CONCRETE ROAD IN NORTH END

Concrete at Intersection of Two North End Streets Attracts Attention and Comment For and Against. The Purpose.

Under the direction of the town council an experiment in road building is being carried on in the north end of town which is being watched with much interest by a number of people.

The stone and dirt roadway at the intersection of Carlisle street and Lincoln avenue is being replaced with concrete which will extend not only over the entire street at the intersection but also over the places where the various crossings were formerly located, thus doing away with the crossings entirely.

The work is being done under the supervision of the highway committee and borough engineer, S. Miley Miller. Street Commissioner Newman and his force of men are employed on the job while Charles E. Lady has the contract for the work.

A heavy layer of stone and cement forms an excellent foundation for the top coating. Granite screenings used in the mixture serve to make the roadway more durable. With favorable weather the work will be completed early in the week but the road will not be ready for use for some days afterward.

This crossing and roadway is to serve as a sort of experimental test and, if it is satisfactory, it is probable that other street intersections in town will receive the same treatment. A number of good features are pointed out by those who favor this method of street work, the drainage question and the doing away with crossings being the principal ones. Many who have seen the operation now being conducted doubt its ultimate satisfaction on account of mud and dirt which will cover the roadway where people will wish to cross on foot and because they claim the slope is too severe for safety in winter.

15 HURT IN COLLISION

Carrying more than 100 passengers, the Blue Mountain Express of the Western Maryland Railroad, while running 30 miles an hour crashed into a mountain engine, westbound, on a single track near Chewsville. Washington county, at 6:34 o'clock, Friday morning.

Five passengers and nine railroad men received injuries. Mrs. P. C. Gardner, of Hagerstown, well known here, was cut about the mouth and head. The Blue Mountain Express, drawn by Engine 156, left Hagerstown about 6:15 o'clock. After picking up passengers at Chewsville the engine steamed ahead at a rapid rate. About 300 yards east of Chewsville is a curve, with trees growing near the tracks. Rounding the curve at a 30 mile clip, Engineer Rineholt was astonished to see Engine No. 726 bearing down on him.

Rineholt stuck to his post, and, while he probably saved the lives of scores, he was painfully injured. He threw on the emergency brakes and as he did so the whistle blasts of the two engines screamed their warnings in unison. Air brakes were clamped so suddenly on the train that some passengers were pitched forward over the seats, while others fell on the floor.

Engineer Hammersia, of the mountain engine, likewise threw on his brakes, but a few seconds later the two big locomotives came together with a crash that was heard for a considerable distance. Both engines left the rails, while steam spouted from broken pipes.

SCOUTS SAVE SNAKE

The Boy Scouts of Baltimore do not believe in killing snakes. The rule against killing was enforced recently at the Baltimore Boy Scouts Camp at Harper's Ferry. A farmer a few days ago was about to kill a blacksnake when Rev. J. W. H. Beale, scoutmaster of the Hampden troop, came along and explained to the farmer what a benefit such a snake was to him. The boys are being taught the difference between snakes that are dangerous and those that kill insects and perform good service for farmers.

1913 CHAUTAUQUA IS NOW IN DOUBT

Want a Two Thousand Dollar Guarantee for Next Year's Attraction. Present System Impossible in the Future.

While the people of Gettysburg and the county are enjoying the sessions of this year's Chautauqua the project for next summer hangs in the balance. The 1911 and 1912 assemblies, conducted by local people, have been run at a loss and to continue another year in the same manner is out of the question.

Rev. George L. Kieffer, who has had much to do with the Gettysburg Chautauqua and who now represents the Pennsylvania Chautauqua Association, has presented at several of the sessions this week a plan by which Gettysburg may not be deprived of this delightful summer attraction and has asked for favorable consideration on the part of local people.

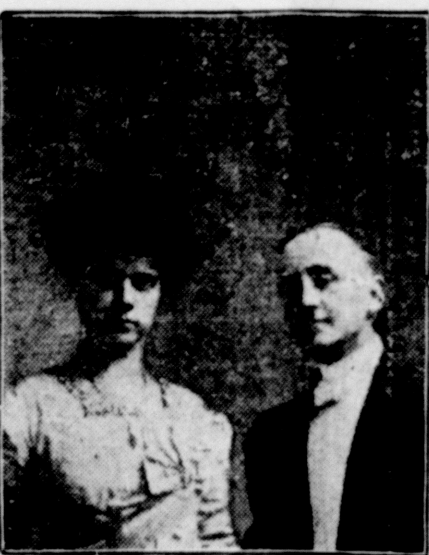

The association which Rev. Mr. Kieffer represents conducts a large number of Chautauquas all over the country and, by purchasing the talent wholesale and sending it on short trips from one town to another, saves sufficient to enable it to furnish the Chautauqua course for just 53 per cent of the sum it would cost an individual town like Gettysburg to get this same talent.

Fine musical organizations, including an Italian band, the very best lecturers on the Chautauqua platform and other attractions would be provided by this association which agrees to put Gettysburg on the circuit provided a pledge of one thousand tickets at $2.00 each can be secured. The Lutheran Summer Assembly which has been meeting here this week, with an enrollment of 160, will meet here again next year during Chautauqua week and will help to raise this amount.

It is definitely understood that no pledges made for next year will be used in any way to pay off the present deficit, which the local guarantors will likely have to pay, and those who take tickets for 1913 will be sure of paying for that and that alone.

The above is in brief the proposition which is now being considered by the Chautauqua management and friends. Whether or not it is to meet with success remains to be seen.

Dr. J. Leonard Levy delighted his audience at Chautauqua Friday afternoon with his lecture on "Twentieth Century Ideals." The Lyric Quartet pleased as usual and assisted in the

UNPLAYED GAME IS FORFEITED

Managers of Sunday School League Settle Various Disputes. Wisotzkey to Pitch only when Other Pitcher is Unavailable.

Various difficulties in the Sunday School Base Ball League were brought before a meeting of the managers on Friday evening for settlement and all contests were disposed of.

The game scheduled for Wednesday evening between Catholics and St. James was forfeited to the former team. It will be recalled that St. James left the field because the Catholics refused to play them if they used Ehrhart who had been ruled as ineligible. This decision places the Catholic team at the head of the list though it comes very far from deciding the race as a number of the most important games are yet to be played.

The question of the eligibility of John Wisotzkey, the Catholic pitcher, was brought up. After considerable discussion it was agreed to have a disinterested surveyor ascertain whether or not Wisotzkey lives outside of the three mile limit. It was however, agreed that, even if he lives outside of that limit, he can be played on the rule which permits men to be used who are visiting their parents. In other words all he would have to do would be to stop at his home here on the way to the ball field.

Other managers declared that they thought this was adhering to the letter of the rule but not to the spirit of the action taken some time ago and, in view of the general opposition, the Catholic management gave a pledge not to use Wisotzkey in the pitcher's box so long as Eckenrode is available.

It was further decided to call games in the future at 6:15 and the president, John Raymond, was given authority to forfeit any game when a team failed to put in its appearance at that time.

Earlier in the evening St. James met the Presbyterians and played four innings when the game was called on account of darkness. The score stood 6 to 0 in favor of St. James but does not count as the full five innings were not played.

BREAKERS IN ROADS

MUST BE FIXED

Automobile owners are grateful for a decision that has been handed down by the state supreme court which decrees that townships, municipalities, counties and state maintaining water holes or "breakers" on public highways are responsible for damages to automobilists or their cars caused by contact with the unnecessary obstructions.

The court decrees that not only the supervisors of public roads but also owners of large estates having private roads open to traffic, toll road companies controlling roads, etc., are responsible for damages to autos injured by contact with these water bars familiarly known as breakers or "Thank-ye-Mams."

It has been the custom of road supervisors for years to place breakers at intervals on all hill sides. Since automobiles have come into general use, a crusade has been waged against the breakers, with the result that in many places they have been eliminated.

AUTO LINE TO PITTSBURGH

The completion of the state road between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh, which passes through Gettysburg, it is said will be quickly followed by the establishment of a line of automobiles that will carry passengers in summer over the route between the two cities in about the same time and with much more comfort than they can travel by train. It is said that the old "shot factory" property near Bedford has been purchased and is to form the site of a fine summer hotel, which will be used largely as a road house, and many similar places are being planned between Philadelphia and Pittsburgh. It is believed that within two years the entire road will be completed and that then those who prefer automobiling can make the trip between the two big cities with little more expense and much more enjoyment than by rail.

STANLEY REPORT ON STEEL TRUST

The Probers Hit Roosevelt and Morgan.

BIG CORPORATION PLAYED

Denounces Former President For Allowing Tennessee Merger and Financing as Beneficiary of Watered Stock.

Washington, Aug. 3.—The report of the committee of the house of representatives directed more than a year ago to investigate the United States Steel corporation was submitted to the house by Representative Stanley, of Kentucky, chairman of the committee. The report was signed by the chairman and Representatives Bartlett, of Georgia; McGillicuddy, Maine; Beall, Texas; and Littleton, New York; Representatives Gardner, Massachusetts; Danforth, New York; Young, Michigan; and Sterling, Illinois, Republicans, dissented from the report of the majority.

Representative Littleton, Democrat, dissenting from the recommendations of the majority for amendment of the Sherman anti-trust law, filed his views on that subject. The report of the majority deals with the steel trust from its inception and describes the various steps by which J. P. Morgan and his associates built up the corporation. In addition to recommendations for legislation suggested as remedial, the Democratic members of the committee made general accusations against the men responsible for the organization.

J. P. Morgan and his associates are held up as being beneficiaries of enormous profits realized from over-capitalization of the subsidiary companies of the Steel Corporation and later of the corporation itself.

Judge E. H. Gary and the "Gary dinners" to steel manufacturers are credited with a scheme by which prices and territory were controlled by the "steel trust" after pooling agreements were discarded.

Former President Roosevelt is accused of aiding in making the control of the steel trust absolute and is charged with being responsible for the gigantic stature which the "trust" has attained.

The United States Steel corporation, flayed as an enemy of organized labor, is accused of lowering the sociological conditions of its employees and of contributing to American industry workmen and work methods un-American and foreign to the best interests of labor.

Principal stockholders of the Steel Corporation are accused of exerting a powerful and injurious influence on the business of the United States by means of control exercised through interlocking directorates of railway and industrial organizations.

The activity of the corporation in politics is laid bare and its influence described, and the "steel trust" as a tariff beneficiary and its part in the making of the Payne-Aldrich tariff act are touched upon by the Democrats.

The effort of the committee to master the moves of the financiers who organized the "trust" resulted in a maze of figures which showed vast profits to those who were interested. In speaking of watered stocks the majority comment is:

"In some instances stocks were not 'watered' in the ordinary acceptance of that term; they were literally deluged. The cost of constructing or reproducing the several plants constituting the combine was inconsequential as compared with the value of this new device for enjoying with immunity an old and hitherto forbidden privilege—an absolute monopoly in a valuable and necessary article of commerce."

From Julian Kennedy, an engineer, the committee traced the development of the National Tube company, a subsidiary of the United States Steel corporation, by J. P. Morgan. He told the committee that he found the "actual value of these plants did not exceed $19,000,000, and that the owners were demoralized and disheartened." The committee says:

"Undismayed by this dismal prospect, J. P. Morgan & Co., with an amazing audacity, launched this new $19,000,000 monopoly on its course with a total capitalization of $80,000,000, and received as compensation securities of this concern aggregating $20,000,000."

The three bills in which the recommendations of the majority of the committee are embodied are, first, an amendment to the Sherman anti-trust act which would put the burden of proof in an action for violation of the act upon the defendant corporation; would permit any one to bring a suit in equity, instead of leaving such power in the hands of the government, where it is at present, and would define unreasonable restraint to be the control of as little as 30 per cent of the value of the total quantity of any specified article. The second bill would prohibit railroad supply manufacturers, including the makers of rails and structural steel, and persons engaged in the mining and sale of coal from becoming directors or officers of railroads engaged in interstate commerce. The third would make illegal the ownership of railways by industrial or mining corporations, firms, companies or officers.

TWO GUNMEN SURROUNDED

New York Detectives Know Their Hiding Place in the Catskills.

New York, Aug. 3.—Twenty central office men and a force of deputy sheriffs have "Gyp the Blood" and "Letty Louie" surrounded in their hiding place in the Catskills. The gunmen are under cover less than 100 miles from New York. We believe they will be under arrest by tonight.

That statement was made in the office of Police Commissioner Waldo. The commissioner had received word from the detectives who have been pitching hay and milking the cows of Delaware and Ulster counties while they waited for the murderers of Herman Rosenthal to slip into the sunlight from their mountain retreats.

"Whitey" Lewis, arrested up in the Catskills, was arraigned before Coroner Feinberg and held without bail for the action of the grand jury. Lewis was charged with firing a shot which caused Rosenthal's death.

RUSH TARIFF BILLS TO THE PRESIDENT

Conference Accepts Measure Similar to One Vetoed.

Washington, Aug. 3.—An agreement between Democratic leaders of the house and senate to frame a compromise wool bill similar to that President Taft vetoed last summer, was reached following the meeting of the conferees on the iron and steel bill.

Senator Simmons, representing the Democratic-Progressive alliance of the senate, and Representative Underwood, Democratic house leader, agreed to such a compromise.

The compromise on the wool bill will be on the basis of 29 per cent duty on raw wool instead of 20 per cent, as in the house bill, and 35 per cent, as in the LaFollette bill.

On yarns the LaFollette rate of 45 per cent and the house rate of 30 per cent will be compromised at 35 per cent.

On ready-made clothing, knit fabrics, women's dress goods and the like the LaFollette rate of 55 per cent and the house rates ranging from 35 to 50 per cent, will be compromised at 49 per cent.

On combed wool and tops the LaFollette rate of 40 per cent and the house rate of 25 per cent will be compromised at 32 per cent.

The iron and steel revision bill, upon which a final agreement between the two houses was ordered proposes an average duty on all classes of imports of about 22 per cent, as compared with an average under the Payne-Aldrich law in 1911 of about 34 per cent.

JURY ACQUITS MRS. GRACE

Was on Verge of Collapse When Foreman Reported.

THE VERDICT IS CHEERED

Her Husband Was Not In Court, and When Seen In His Home Declared She Is Guilty.

Atlanta, Ga., Aug. 3.—"God bless you, gentlemen!" cried Mrs. Daisy Ulrich Opie Grace when the jury found her not guilty of the charge of shooting her husband.

There was a note of hysteria in Mrs. Grace's voice, and she seemed on the verge of a collapse, but her lawyers patted her on the shoulder and urged her to restrain herself, and she soon became calm.

Then the crowd in the court room cheered the verdict and surged about Mrs. Grace, many of the women weeping. At last the deadly whiteness of Mrs. Grace's face was relieved by a flush and she began to smile. Then she approached each of the twelve jurors and gave them thanks.

"I feel like kissing and hugging you all," said Mrs. Grace. "I trusted you all the time. I knew you would not believe what they said about me."

Followed by a cheering throng, Mrs. Grace soon left the court room and went to the offices of her attorneys. There she received a telegram from her sister in Philadelphia to the effect that Mrs. Grace's blind son is ill.

"I will go to little Webster at once," said Mrs. Grace.

Eugene Grace was not in court. He was taken back to his home in Newnan, and there heart the verdict.

"I don't care what the jury said," declared the paralyzed husband; "she is guilty, and she knows it."

Grace announced that he will make a statement about the case and at once sue for a divorce.

The verdict was generally expected. It was conceded that the state failed to sustain the charge that Mrs. Grace had drugged and shot her husband and locked him in to die in order to get $25,000 insurance on his life.

Mrs. Grace's testimony had a tremendous effect on the jury and its main statements were generally credited, especially those relating to the large sums of money she had lavished on Grace and his attentions to other women.

It developed that Mrs. Daisy Grace's remarkable story of the shooting of her husband was a carefully prepared declamation, pruned, amended and polished by her lawyers, and as carefully rehearsed as a dramatic offering by a professional actress.

For over two months Mrs. Grace rehearsed the statement until she was better perfect.

There were 8000 words in the statement, but Mrs. Grace never faltered once during its delivery.

The bringing of Grace into court on a stretcher was done by the prosecution in an effort to cause the accused wife to break down, but it failed.

GOAT SINKS BOAT DROWNS

Chester, Pa., Aug. 3.—While Thomas Willis temporarily abandoned his skiff along the banks of Chester river a goat, owned by Amos Bell, jumped into the craft.

The animal chewed the shore line in twain, the skiff swung around in the swift current and was some distance from the starting point when Willis returned.

When the goat saw the shoreline receding it began to grow excited. It ran from stern to prow and back again several times, until one of its hoofs punctured the craft beneath the water line. The skiff quickly filled with water and sank, taking the goat with it. The goat was drowned.

When Willis and Bell met a wordy argument ensued. Bell said that Willis was responsible for the drowning of his goat, and Willis blamed Bell for the wreck of his skiff. Seeking satisfaction, both proceeded to the office of Alderman Melville, who after hearing the testimony dismissed the case.

FATAL TO MIGRATING BIRDS

A writer furnishes some striking figures concerning the havoc wrought among migrating birds by big lighthouses. The lighthouse on the Pointe de Penmarc'h, in Brittany, France, has a revolving light of 80,000,000 candle power. Visiting this on November 10 last year, and again on the twelfth, the observer saw tens of thousands of birds whirling round, and it seemed to him that the light shot out a perfect hall of electric sparks among the migrants. Next morning he was present while the dead bodies were being collected. They are dispatched every day to Paris by train, and the "catch" he was told, often comprised from 2,000 to 4,000 victims; one morning alone there had been more than 800 woodcock in the "bag."

On the two mornings he was present there were only a score of woodcock the first day, but on the second the ground was littered with from 600 to 1,000 victims, chiefly blackbirds, ducks, woodcock, thrushes and golden plovers. Another offender is the lighthouse on Belle Ile, off the south coast of Brittany. On two dark nights last November, with an east wind blowing, this light caused the death of 8,200 birds, including curlews, thrushes, snipe, starlings, over 100 woodcock and some sparrows and quails. Thirdly, the Pillar lighthouse kills every season some 700 woodcock.

An old sportsman of Normandy declares that round the lighthouse of Barfleur last November there were picked up in the course of four nights 10,000 birds of all sorts, including 1,800 woodcock. The destruction of bird life by the hundreds of lighthouses elsewhere can only be imagined.

Her Idea of Art.

An old gentleman who owned a fine estate not far from the country seat of the duke of Devonshire (which is open to the public when the duke is there) one day drove with a party of friends to this famous residence, taking with him his housekeeper, Martha, a good old soul, who had been with him a great many years.

Arriving at Chatsworth they passed slowly through room after room of almost priceless pictures. But Martha spoke never a word, although it was evident that she was not missing anything. Each and every picture that her eye lit on underwent a most rigid scrutiny, much to the amusement of the rest of the party.

At last her master turned to her and said: "Well, Martha, what do you think of it all?" "Why," exploded Martha, rapturous. "I cannot see a speck of dust anywhere."

Origin of Beet Sugar.

When the fleets of Great Britain blockaded all the ports of Continental Europe, during the Napoleonic wars, Europe was cut off from its supply of sugar. It became necessary to find a substitute. Before the discovery of America sugar was unknown and honey was the universal sweetening. But the supply of honey was not equal to the demand now. In some countries, as in Bohemia, they made sugar from the maple; in other countries they crystallized dextrose from the juice of the grape, but these sources were inadequate. The final outcome of the matter was the birth of the beet sugar industry. It was 100 years ago, in 1810, that the first loaf of beet sugar was made and presented to Napoleon; and the centenary of this event has just been celebrated in France.

At Minneapolis the party will be the guests of Miss Isabel Vincent, a classmate of Miss Taft at Bryn Mawr. Miss Vincent's mother, Mrs. George Vincent, wife of the president of the University of Minnesota, will be the chaperone during the horseback trip.

BEEF PRICES ARE HIGHEST IN HISTORY

Chicago Packers Promise Further Advance.

Philadelphia, Aug. 3.—The wholesale price of beef was advanced to the highest point in the history of the trade at the stockyards in Chicago, whole beefs selling at $9.85 a hundred pounds. Predictions were made that it will be $10 next week.

The news of the arbitrary advance by the packers discourages meat dealers of Philadelphia, who during the past two weeks have been paying $2 to $2.50 a hundred pounds more than during the early part of July for their beef. They had anticipated that the market would go lower next week.

The announcement of the advance is contrary to views expressed by many of the Philadelphia wholesalers this week that beef had reached its highest point and must drop.

C. S. Jones, president of the Chicago live stock exchange, said that scarcity of cattle is the cause of the price advance. This is one of the "beef trust" old excuses. In the winter time the high cost of corn is blamed. Mr. Jones urged that more beef be raised.

KEEN INTEREST IN THIRD PARTY

Hard to Predict Outcome of the Movement.

CLAIMS OF THE ORGANIZERS

Colonel's Followers Declare Contest Will Be Between Roosevelt and Wilson, With Taft a Poor Third.

Chicago, Aug. 3.—All political eyes in the nation are now directed on the Roosevelt third party national convention to be held in this city. Statesmen of other climes and countries and publicists generally have manifested keen interest in the effort to establish a new political party in the United States.

It would be extremely hazardous at this time to venture an opinion as to the success or failure of the Roosevelt third party movement. The Taft people belittle it and predict only an ephemeral bearing on the Republican national situation now and hereafter. The enthusiastic and bitterly determined adherents insist that within forty days after the Roosevelt third party is established the presidential race will be between Roosevelt, the candidate of this convention, and Governor Woodrow Wilson, the Democratic aspirant, and that President Taft will be a poor third on election night, Nov. 5.

The supporters of President Taft predict, and friends of Governor Wilson assert, that the results of this Roosevelt convention will resemble the ripple on the political waters faintly observed in the national campaign of 1896, when Palmer and Buckner were the gold Democratic national ticket and got in all the country but 135,000 votes. Such predictions and assertions cannot represent the real sentiments of the Taft or Wilson national campaigners.

At the moment there is but one basis of calculation on which the Roosevelt movement can be estimated. It is the vote which General James B. Weaver, of Iowa, received in the campaign of 1892 as the candidate of the Populist party for president. In that campaign General Weaver received 1,041,028 votes in the country and twenty-two votes in the electoral college as follows: Colorado, 4; Idaho, 3; Kansas, 10; Nevada, 3; North Dakota, 1; and Oregon, 1.

General Weaver's vote in the electoral college that year did not affect the result. The total vote in the college was 446, of which Cleveland received 277, Harrison 145 and Weaver 22. It requires a majority of the electoral college to elect a president. The electoral college for 1912 numbers 531 electoral votes, of which 266 will be necessary to elect either Taft, Wilson or Roosevelt.

Several in the Roosevelt camp said that without the slightest doubt Roosevelt will prove on election night to be three times stronger than General Weaver was in 1892. In that event Roosevelt would get 66 votes in the electoral college. Inasmuch as there are 531 votes in the college this year, that would leave to be divided between Taft and Wilson 465 votes, and inasmuch as the successful candidate must receive 266 votes, neither Taft nor Wilson might have the necessary majority and the election might be thrown into the house of representatives.

WILSON WON'T RESIGN

Will Hold Governorship During His Campaign.

Sea Girt, N. J., Aug. 3.—Formal announcement was made by Governor Wilson that he would not resign the governorship of New Jersey during his campaign for the presidency.

The governor had kept his mind open on the question of resigning ever since the Baltimore convention. Leading Democrats in the state, however, have urged him to follow the precedent of Grover Cleveland, who was nominated for the presidency, but continued as governor of New York.

ORDERS WARSHIP TO NICARAGUA

Government Alarmed at Revolutionary Movement.

Washington, Aug. 3.—Evidence of the growing anxiety of the administration in regard to the revolutionary movement in Nicaragua was shown when orders were issued to the gunboat Tacoma, at Guantanamo, Cuba, to proceed forthwith to Bluefield, Nicaragua, on the Caribbean coast.

The Tacoma is due to arrive there on Monday and will try to communicate with Managua to allow Minister Weitzel to keep the state department informed of developments.

The gunboat Annapolis, on the west coast, has been getting only fragmentary advices from Managua. These have been sufficiently alarming to warrant sending another warship.

Followers of former President Ze laya, of Nicaragua, are preparing to rally to the revolution, according to dispatches from Port Limon, Costa Rica. Zelaya followers are said to be leaving there and hurrying to Nicaragua.

Manuel E. Velasquez, Nicaraguan minister at Panama, is unable to communicate with his government owing to the wires connecting with Managua being cut.

LOCKED DOGS IN CELLAR

Animals Ate Week's Food in One Day; Howled the Other Six.

Philadelphia, Aug. 3.—Accused of having kept two bulldogs locked in the cellar of their home while they were away on a week's vacation, Thomas Allen and his wife, Sarah Allen, of 3356 I street, were fined $13.50 each by Magistrate Belcher.

Before they went away Allen and his wife left what they considered an ample supply of food for the dogs, but the animals devoured everything the first day. Later when they became hungry they barked and whined almost continuously, attracting the attention of a neighbor, who fed them by throwing food through a cellar window.

Peculiar Case of Poisoning.
Metal poisoning from handling copper coins was the curious cause for death recently assigned at West Ham, England. The deceased, age twenty-seven, had been employed to collect coins from penny-in-the-slot gas meters, and his physician testified that the coins were often green with verdigris, which remained on the collector's hands and was absorbed through his skin. He died of curling his mustache with his hand.

Lacking Important Point.
Can a woman be a successful "magician"? A contemporary wizard says that she can, and that in London there are many society women who have taken a course in wizardry as a means of becoming proficient in some kind of "parlor trick" by which to entertain company. It does seem, though, that a magician without coat sleeves to pull back, as a preliminary to doing his marvels, would be fatally deficient in paraphernalia.

Storing of Electric Heat.
A method has been devised for storing electric heat to be used for cooking purposes.

CHAPTER VII.

In Which the Parson and Mr. Pepper Declare Their Independence.

That afternoon, when dinner was over, the Reverend John decided to make a few duty calls. The first of these he determined should be on the Peppers.

The Pepper house was situated just off the main road on the lane leading over the dunes to the ocean and the light. It was a small building, its white paint dingy and storm beaten, and its little fenced-in front yard dotted thickly with clumps of silver-leaf saplings. A sign, nailed crookedly on a post, informed those seeking such information that within was to be found "Abishal G. W. Pepper, Tax Collector, Assessor, Boots and Shoes Repaired." And beneath this was fastened a shingle with the chalked notice, "Salt Hay for Sale."

The boot and shoe portion of the first sign was a relic of other days. Kyan had been a cobbler once, but it is discouraging to wait three or four weeks while the pair of boots one has left to be resoled are forgotten in a corner.

The minister walked up the dusty lane, lifted the Pepper gate, swung it back on its one hinge, and knocked at the front door. No one coming in answer to the knock, he tried again. Then from somewhere in the rear of the house came the sound of a human voice.

"Hi!" it called faintly. "Whoever you be, don't bust that door down. Come round here."

Ellery "came along" as far as the angle where the ell joined the main body of the house. So far as he could see every door and window was closed and there were no signs of life. However, he stepped to the door, a green-painted affair of boards, and ventured another knock.

"Don't start that poundin' again!" protested the voice. "Come round to 'other side where I be."

So around went the Reverend John, smiling broadly. But even on "other side" there was no one to be seen. And no door, for that matter.

"Why!" exclaimed the voice, "it 'tain't Mr. Ellery! How d'ye do? Glad to see you, Mr. Ellery. Fine day, ain't it? Here I be at this window."

Sure enough; one of the windows on this side of the house was raised about six inches at the bottom, the shade was up, and peering beneath the sash the minister discerned the expressive features of Abishal Pepper—or as much of those features as the size of the opening permitted to be seen.

"Oh!" exclaimed the visitor, "Is that you, Mr. Pepper? Well, I'm glad to see you, at last. You are rather hard to see, even now."

"Er—er—come to call, did you?"

"Why, yes, that was my intention."

"Hum! Er—er—Lavinia, she's gone over to Thankful Payne's. She heard that Thankful's cousin up to Middleboro had died—passed away, I mean—and she thought she'd run over and find out if Thankful was willed anything. She said she'd be back pretty soon."

"Very well. Then, as she won't be gone long, perhaps I'll come in and wait."

"You see, Mr. Ellery," stammered Kyan, "I—I'd like to have you come in just rate, but—er—Lavinia she's got the key. She—she—Oh, consarn it all, Mr. Ellery, she's locked me in this room a-purpose, so's I won't get out and go somewhere without her knowin' it."

"She done it a-purpose," continued Kyan, in a burst of confidence. "She had me put one of them new-fangled spring locks on the door of this room 't'other day, 'cause she said she was afraid of tramps and wanted some place to shut herself up in if one of 'em come. And—after dinner to-day she sent me in here for somethin' and then slammed the door on me. Said she called I'd stay put till she got back from Thankful's. She knew mighty well I couldn't get out of the window, 'cause it won't open no further'n 'tis now. I wan't never so provoked in my life. 'Tain't no way to treat your own brother, lockin' him up like a young one; now, is it?"

"I don't know. You're of age, Mr. Pepper, and you must decide for yourself. I think I should declare my independence. Really, I must go."

"Stop your foolishness! Oh!—I—I ask your pardon, Mr. Ellery. That ain't no way to talk to a minister. But I'm goin' to go out when I want to. If I bust a hole through the clapboards, I ain't fascinat'." You ask any woman—except her—if I be, and see what they say. What'll I do?"

"Ha, ha! I don't know, I'm sure. You might lock her up, I suppose, just for a change."

"Hey!" There was a sound from behind the pane as if the imprisoned one had slapped his knee. "By gum! I never thought of that. Would you now, Mr. Ellery? Would you? Shsh! shsh! somebody's comin'. Maybe it's her. Run around to the door, Mr. Ellery, quick. And don't tell her I've seen you, for mercy sakes! Don't now, will ye? Please! Run!"

The minister did not run, but he walked briskly around the corner. Sure enough, Lavinia was there, just unlocking the door. She expressed herself as very glad to see the caller, ushered him into the sitting room and disappeared, returning in another moment with her brother, whom she unblushingly said had been taking a nap. Abishal did not contradict her; instead, he merely looked apprehensively at the minister.

The call was a short one. Lavinia did seven-eighths of the talking and Ellery the rest. Kyan was silent.

He told no one of Kyan's confidential disclosure, and, after some speculation as to whether or not there might be a sequel, put the whole ludicrous affair out of his mind. A week from the following Sunday he dined in state at the Daniels' table. Captain

"Here I Be at This Window."

Elkanah was gracious and condescending. Annabel was more than that. She was dressed in her newest gown and was so very gushing and affable that the minister felt rather embarrassed. When, after the meal was over, Captain Elkanah excused himself and went upstairs for his Sabbath nap, the embarrassment redoubled. Miss Annabel spoke very confidentially of her loneliness without "congenial society," of how very much she did enjoy Mr. Ellery's intellectual sermons, and especially what a treat it had been to have him as a guest.

He left the big house as soon as he could without giving offense, and started back toward the parsonage. But the afternoon was so fine and the early summer air so delightful that he changed his mind and, jumping the fence at the foot of Cannon Hill, set off across the fields toward the bluffs and the bay shore.

The sun was low in the west as he entered the grove of pines on the bluff. The red light between the boughs made brilliant carpet patterns on the thick pine needles and the smell was balsam and sweet. Between the tree trunks he caught glimpses of the flats, now partially covered, and they reminded him of his narrow escape and of Nat Hammond, his rescuer.

Thinking of the Hammond family reminded him of another member of it. Not that he needed to be reminded; he had thought of her often enough since she ran away from him in the rain that night. And then he saw her. She was standing just at the outer edge of the grove, leaning against a tree and looking toward the sunset. She wore a simple white dress and her hat hung upon her shoulders by its ribbons. The rosy light edged the white gown with pink and the fringes of her dark hair were crinkly lines of fire. Her face was grave, almost sad.

John Ellery stood still, with one foot uplifted for a step. The girl looked out over the water and he looked at her. Then a crow, one of several whirling above the pines, spied the intruder and screamed a warning. The minister was startled and stepped back. A dead limb beneath his foot cracked sharply. Grace turned and saw him.

"Oh!" she cried. "Who is it?"

Ellery emerged from the shadow.

"Don't be frightened, Miss Van Horne," he said. "It is—er—I—"

"You came to see the sunset, I suppose?" she said hurriedly, as if to head off a question. "So did I. It is a beautiful evening for a walk, isn't it?"

She had said precisely the same thing on that other evening, when they stood in the middle of "Hammond's Turn-off" in the driving rain. He remembered it, and so, evidently, did she, for she colored slightly and smiled.

"I mean it this time," she said. "I'm glad you didn't get cold from your wetting the other day."

"Oh! I wasn't very wet. You wouldn't let me lend you the umbrella, so I had that to protect me on the way home."

"Not then; I meant the other morning when Nat—Cap'n Hammond—met you on the flats. He said you were wading the main channel and it was over your boots."

"It was worse than that, a good deal worse. It might have been my last cruise. I'm pretty certain that I owe the captain my life. That part of the channel I proposed swimming was exactly where two men have been drowned, so people say. I'm not a very strong swimmer, and they were. So, you see."

Grace cried out in astonishment.

"Oh!" she exclaimed. Then pointing toward the bay, she asked: "Out there, by the end of that leader, was it?"

"Yes, that was it."

She drew a long breath. Then, after a moment:

"And Nat spoke as if it was all a joke," she said.

"No doubt he did. From what I hear of your brother, he generally refers to his own plucky, capable actions as jokes. Other people call them something else."

"He isn't my brother," she interrupted absently. "I wish he was."

She sighed as she uttered the last sentence.

"No, of course he isn't your real brother; I forgot. But he must seem like one."

"Yes," rather doubtfully.

"You must be proud of him."

"I am," there was nothing doubtful this time.

"Miss Van Horne! What did your uncle say about Cap'n Nat's meeting me the other day?"
